Business in Brooklyn and Manhattan Suspended While Crowds Read Bulletins of World's Series Struggle

CROWDS AT HOME WATCH DOWNFALL OF FAVORITE SONS

Residents of Greater City Jammed Around Bulletin Boards During Game.

BROOKLYN STILL HOPES FOR BETTER RESULTS

Business was entirely suspended in Brooklyn yesterday. The inhabitants of the huge Long Island borough spent the greater part of the afternoon in wretched silence watching scoreboards, tickers and any other news agency which might tell them the harrowing details of the fate of their favorite Superbas. Brookbyn is not downhearted, but rather temperarily breathless and spellbound that te inseball heroes should have proved to be unequal to the first tack in world's series warfare.

No less interested in the Boston exfrement was Maphattan: Everywhere crowds gathered watching the bulleting of the annual diamond classic. But as was the case in Brooklyn the Manhatmites were awed to silence by the feating Red Sox, who were shown hiting, helding and pitching past all efferts of the National League champions, "Just wait until we get them at Ebhets Field," was the warning of the depressed and dejected Flatbush followers. Boston figures to win on their home pasture." was the decision of many.

There were two big times in the early part of the game for the home crowds. A cheer that might have been heard in Paris came from a million throats when Za b Wheat tripled with Casey Stengel in rating distance of the plate. Again when third Meyers was shown speeding sround the sacks following his smash to centre field for three bases.

However, neither of these thrillers was a caution to the hope and suspense brought about in that ninth inning. When the Dodgers began their final attack a few cheers greeted the knowledge that one man was on base, but when the est followed to first safely and the est and thes continued until four runs are ever the plate, three on bases and Chief Meyers got a triple in the fifth inning which was entirely a "sun hit." Walker lost the ball and backed out too late. He didget his gloved hand on it, but could not hold it, and was excused from the error column.

Wheat's triple had a clean ring to it, but his first hit was very flukey. It was a grounder which Janvrin should have taken, but Hobby fielded it. As Shore was slow in covering first and got there too late to take the throw.

The Boston men made their eight hits go d for fifteen bases, while the ten Brooklyn hits were for fourteen.

Boston Outfielders at Work Again.

Of course, that old spectacular pair—Hooper and Lewis—again were on the job with both feet. World's series were made to order for Hopper. There is no outfielder who his taken part in numerous series who has turned in the same number of star catches as Hooper.
Hooper's catch may not have been as spectacular as the one by which he blocked a home run for Doyle in 1912,
and prevented the Glants from winning the last game in extra minings, but it was not far behind. It deserves top
